choose the answer

brands through (often
salt and sugar. It is in
loyal customers stay
y, many have been
ehind closed doors.
sumers don't notice the
t. 'The research shows
re doing, it makes
atever reason they

r a major food producer
Heston Blumenthal,
t the time, people
horrible," although
better to change
rough Blumenthal's
d been studying the
'Sound of the Sea'
e-star restaurant.
nbers of the early-
e Italian futurists, were
h frogs' legs a century

pence's sensory
entre. This includes
ed music enhances
brassy sounds make
ng when shapes affect
how you perceive a
be matching music
d last year, a well-
e app that plays a
ns; they omitted to
h, which is all too
ence.

es like in the Spence
y ate rabbit, with the
d the one at which
, multi-coloured light
th a tone generator,
s lined up to see
.' Home, sweet shops,
tronomy conferences:
pence.

31 Which word in the first paragraph is used to indicate distaste?

A maggoty (line 4)
B gustatory (line 7)
C stealthy (line 10)
D hefty (line 11)

32 What does the writer suggest about Spence's work in the fourth paragraph?

A Small-scale projects have brought it most success.
B It is less forward-looking than might be expected.
C Perceptions of its value have changed.
D It suffers from inadequate resources.

33 What point does Spence make about major food companies in the fifth paragraph?

A They should pay less attention to public opinion.
B They will benefit in the long term from selling healthier goods.
C They are reluctant to invest in developing new products.
D They have been too secretive about the way they work.

34 Spence's view of Heston Blumenthal is one of

A enthusiasm for his links with innovators from the past.
B admiration for his influence on ways of thinking about food.
C fascination for his involvement with large food manufacturers.
D respect for his thorough knowledge of science.

35 Spence is concerned that his ideas

A are being developed in unexpected ways.
B seem too challenging to be widely accepted.
C appear to attract the wrong sort of organisations.
D are often applied in a way that neglects some details.

36 What does the final paragraph highlight about Spence?

A the commitment he shows to his research
B the unpredictable nature of his character
C the talent he has for entertaining people
D the busy daily schedule he follows